Supplemental figure 3A. Map showing the distribution of neonate tiger sharks, Galeocerdo cuvier, caught in the western North Atlantic Ocean in May between 1963 and 2018 by participants in the National Marine Fisheries Service’s Cooperative Shark Tagging Program, between 1963 and 2018. GOM=Gulf of Mexico, CS=Caribbean Sea. Dotted black line is the 200 m contour.
Supplemental figure 3B. Map showing the distribution of neonate tiger sharks, Galeocerdo cuvier, caught in the western North Atlantic Ocean in June between 1963 and 2018 by participants in the National Marine Fisheries Service’s Cooperative Shark Tagging Program, between 1963 and 2018. GOM=Gulf of Mexico, CS=Caribbean Sea. Dotted black line is the 200 m contour.
Supplemental figure 3C. Map showing the distribution of neonate tiger sharks, Galeocerdo cuvier, caught in the western North Atlantic Ocean in July between 1963 and 2018 by participants in the National Marine Fisheries Service’s Cooperative Shark Tagging Program, between 1963 and 2018. GOM=Gulf of Mexico, CS=Caribbean Sea. Dotted black line is the 200 m contour.
Supplemental figure 3D. Map showing the distribution of neonate tiger sharks, Galeocerdo cuvier, caught in the western North Atlantic Ocean in August between 1963 and 2018 by participants in the National Marine Fisheries Service’s Cooperative Shark Tagging Program, between 1963 and 2018. GOM=Gulf of Mexico, CS=Caribbean Sea. Dotted black line is the 200 m contour.