CONTENTS

COVER: The research vessel Hernan Cortez (built in 1964) of the Florida Board of Conservation is a conventional, double-rigged shrimp trawler. The double-rig deck arrangement permits dragging a single net from either side or two nets simultaneously. She participated (with the U. S. Bureau of Commercial Fisheries) in a survey of the trawlfish potential off the Florida west coast to determine the species composition, distribution, relative abundance, and availability of bottomfish to trawling gear. (See p. 1 of this issue.)
